This special issue intends to publish original, high quality, supply chain management empirical research that will have a significant impact on SCM theory and practice. Manuscripts accepted for publication in this issue must have clear implications for Supply chain managers based on one or more of a variety of rigorous research methodologies. This issue also publishes insightful meta-analyses of the SCM literature, conceptual/theoretical studies with clear implications for practice, comments on past articles, studies concerning the SCM field itself, and other such matters relevant to SCM.

Regular articles accepted for publication in this issue must have clear implications for practitioners who manage product and process design, operations, and supply chains based on one or more of a variety of rigorous research methodologies. Manuscripts accepted for publication must meet the following criteria:

1. Research papers in the field of SCM in manufacturing and services.
2. Research rigor applied through the scientific theory-building approach.
3. Managerial relevance.
